COMMUNITY TICKET SHAPING.

Committee to Report Selection on Wednesday Evening.

The community meeting at the Court House on Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a non-partisan ticket for certain borough offices, town councilmen and school directors, was largely attended, the court room being well filled, many more being present than at the usual town meetings.

Hon. Wm. H. Tipton called the meeting to order stating the purpose to be to get away from the partisanship usually accompanying the filling of borough offices and making it distasteful to many citizens to stand for any office. All this could be avoided by a ticket which would go on both the Democratic and Republican tickets. Temporary officers were named, Hon. Wm. H. Tipton for chairman, Pius G. Breighner, vice chairman, and George P. Black, secretary.

The Gettysburg Band gave a concert in front of the Court House prior to the meeting and before and after the session in court room.

Dr. J. A. Singmaster made a motion that a committee of nine with the three officers select and obtain acceptances from citizens to run on the proposed ticket and report their action for ratification at a meeting on Wednesday evening of next week.

The discussion of the motion brought to light the fact that the method proposed to be followed has been in vogue in Biglerville for a number of years. A single ticket was arrived at after a conference and town meeting and the ticket so agreed upon was placed in nomination both on the Democratic and Republican ticket and the result had been no fight at the polls and that any citizen selected to serve was not in a position to refuse, as no work had to be done for either nomination or election. There was no party interest for such an official to serve but the welfare of the community was his entire concern. It was suggested that the nominations should be confined to the offices carrying no salary, town council and school director and motion was so amended. The importance of a citizens movement like the one proposed was shown by the fact that at an early date the town will have to raise large sums of money for the proposed paving of the principal streets and it was likely that any school directors chosen this year would be called upon before their term was out to raise large sums for a new high school building, an imperative need of the day, and that the citizens should move to take a hand as proposed at this time was most opportune. After the discussion the motion was unanimously adopted and meeting adjourned.

Chairman Wm. H. Tipton on Thursday announced his committee, composed of the three officers, and J. D. Swope, Esq., J. L. Williams, Esq., Chas. E. Stahl, Esq., Dr. Wm. M. Biggs, A. Danner Buehler and Calvin Solt.

HAS ATTAINED LARGE PROPORTIONS THROUGHOUT COUNTRY.

Its Development for Rural Communities Has Been Placed in Charge of Expert.

The American Red Cross has announced that it now has in operation in this country 3,700 home service sections, and that of these sections 2,900 are in localities having a population under 8,000. It follows, therefore, that plans for the extension of Red Cross peace-time program must have special reference to the conditions affecting the rural population. Those who have studied the question realize that the first essential thing is to look at the rural communities through rural glasses and not through the city lens. It has been found that schemes for social betterment which do very well for the cities do not work out at all advantageously when applied to the country, and that workers of good intentions, but with the urban point of view, make more or less of a mess of things when they try to operate outside of their original stamping ground.

With these facts in mind, the Bureau of Rural Organization has been created in the Red Cross Department of Civilian Relief, and Professor E. L. Morgan of the faculty of the Massachusetts College of Agriculture has been appointed director. Professor Morgan probably is as well qualified as any man in the country to undertake the work in hand. For nine years he has been engaged in the organization of rural communities in New England, for the improvement of economic conditions, and his success in that work and his writings on the economic mobilization of the rural community have won him a country-wide reputation. With this experience and his intimate understanding of the rural people, he now takes up the social side of the work with the Red Cross.

Professor Morgan, who is now getting his bureau in shape for action, has tentatively outlined the aims of the rural work of the Red Cross in the following statement:

"In any plan of rural development the local community must be thought of as the unit of importance. It is where the people live. It is the basis on which they come together for social and business relationships. They must be led to come together on this same basis to study local problems, with the help and education of various organizations, boards, and institutions whose function it is to give them help. Such study of local conditions should result in a definite program of work, which should be decided on by the people and carried out as fast as local conditions warrant.

"The Red Cross does not assume that it can render all the service a community will be in need of. It does assume, however, that in doing its own work it should lead the people of the local community to see the possibility of a long-term plan on as broad a scale as possible. Every Red Cross worker will be informed as to where the community can get help in other than Red Cross work, and will consider it part of his duty to connect the community with those sources of help.

"There will be found plenty of communities where people have not been in the habit of coming together. Anything of an elaborate nature, of course, will be impossible under such conditions. Every community must begin at its natural starting point and development should come only as rapidly as is feasible.

"The rural community must be thought of as being only a part of a chain of development. There are numerous problems which can be met only on the basis of a county, such as problems of education, health, roads, development of agriculture, home making, &c. There are to be found in most counties a number of county-wide organizations.

SWAT THE FLY AND WIN PRIZE

Two Weeks Contest to Start on Monday, August 4th.

The State Health Department through its local representatives has arranged a Fly Contest to be conducted here in connection with their state-wide campaign for the eradication of this pest. The contest will begin on Monday, August 4th, and continue for two weeks, closing Monday, August 18. During this time those entering the contest are to trap or swat as many flies as possible and collect them in a box or other container. On Monday afternoon, August 18, the flies are to be brought to the State Dispensary Room on Baltimore street, where a committee will measure the collections and make the awards. The Gettysburg Parent-Teachers' Association is co-operating with the State Health Board in this movement and has offered to pay ten cents for every pint of flies delivered. They will also give a cash prize to the person bringing in the most flies.

The contest will be open to anyone from Gettysburg and vicinity. It is very likely that during the next week campaigns in Biglerville, Arendtsville, Littlestown and New Oxford will be started.

To assist with the work the People's Drug Store will sell fly swatters at cost to those entering the contest. The State Department gives the following directions for making the barrel traps that have proved so effective. Knock out the ends of a sugar barrel or nail keg. Cut a sheet of wire into circular form so that its diameter will be just twice the diameter of the open end of the barrel. Next, divide the netting into two equal parts by cutting straight through the center; now twist one of the pieces into a cone by bringing the straight edges together. Fasten the edges securely by sewing with twines or fine wire. (The left over pieces will answer for a second trap.) Clip off the point of the cone, leaving an opening a half inch in diameter. Now push the cone into an open end of the barrel, point forward. Securely tack the flare end to the inner side of the rim of the barrel, being careful to make it fly tight at every point. Place a close fitting wire screen over the other end of the barrel so arranged that it can be removed when necessary. To the cone end of the barrel, attach four legs about 2 inches in height. All is now ready for the bait. Place upon a dish a piece of dead fish or some bread and milk to which sugar has been added; or sour milk to which sugar has been added.

Place the trap over the dish containing the bait. Always keep the trap baited. Flies will be attracted by the light from above, walk up the cone through the hole at the top and become prisoners.

To empty the trap, pour boiling water in from the top. When the flies have been killed, remove the top screen and dump the trap.

Wettest July Ever.

The total rainfall for July up to Thursday according to the records of Col. E. B. Cope, had amounted to 7 inches, making the month the wettest July in history of local weather statistics. Last Thursday was the only day since St. Swithin's Day on July 15 without a shower. To have nearly one-fifth of the annual rain fall tumbles down in one month's time has had the tendency to keep things rather wet.

When you see Doan's Kidney Pills recommended in this paper you must always find the recommender a Gettysburg resident. It's the same everywhere—in 3800 towns in the U. S. Read this Gettysburg recommendation. Then insist on having Doan's. You will know what you are getting:

D. F. Arendt, Railroad St., Gettysburg, says: "I suffered with kidney trouble for some years. I had sharp pains across the small of my back and in my sides and had to get up often during the night. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was greatly benefited."

LASTING RESULTS.

On February 14, 1916, Mr. Arendt said: "I never let a chance slip by to say a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills. I can now say the cure Doan's gave me has remained permanent. I know of no better kidney medicine."

Scotland Turning to Peace.

In Scotland the progress from war to peace is proceeding at an active pace. One firm is now specializing in the manufacture of internal combustion engines and is already for fitting boats and ships with engines.

One of the most important industries in Scotland is the manufacture of shoes. The industry formerly claimed by Germany, while in Glasgow for making shoes was suspended war material and gives employment to numbers of discharged soldiers.

POORLY PAID MAIL CARRIERS

Dogs That Bring News From Home to the Lonely Men in Alaska Get Little for Work.

There is a good deal of talk over the meager pay received by mail carriers, but the most poorly paid of Uncle Sam's mail carriers receive far less than the familiar postman, yet never make complaint. They get a pound and a half of dried salmon for a full day's pay.

They are the husky and the Malanute, the native Eskimo and the native Indian dogs in the great Yukon country. Without them the gold-seekers, the fur traders, the shopkeepers and the mission workers in the interior of Alaska (except for the more fortunate ones who live along the lines of the few railroads) would receive no mail from the time the ice forms over the rivers in October until it breaks up in May.

Even the most inaccessible of post-offices receive mail once a month in winter (though only one mail is carried then), and for those in the interior of Alaska the husky and the Malanute are mail carrier and Santa Claus combined. They would be without word from the outside world for eight months every year if it were not for the mail dogs.

These animals are pushed to their utmost by considerate and cruel driver alike, for there is a prescribed task for them every day, and all they get out of it is a pound and a half of dried salmon at the end of the day.

When they are not working their allowances of fish is cut down. In the summer they are fed on the refuse of fresh salmon at the fishing dumps, where the mail contractor boards them out until the rivers freeze again.

The United States government puts up public buildings all over the country, and a cornerstone is customarily laid. But there is no hole in the latter unless it is requested by the local authorities, or a Masonic body desires to conduct a ceremony.

The Masons take a special interest in cornerstones. On such an occasion they appear in full regalia, and a copper box is used to hold the articles interred. The box is soldered up and placed inside the cornerstone, which is then set in place.

Shoe Styles Every Stitch Yank

One lesson that the war taught America was that we were not depending upon Europe one half as much for style ideas as was popularly supposed. The new summer and fall shoes have proved this out, because, while Paris style leaders were trying to shove the Cuban heel down our throats, American women are going their merry way, with the graceful high heel in pump and shoe that is 100 per cent Yank. Milady is here shown hanging out a line of reasonable hose—but it's not a wash—instead the newest in woven transparent patterns and a few embroidered styles.

One year ago the world was paying much attention to the doings of this man—not in admiration but—today his latest picture is not recognized by one out of fifty—because a great change has taken place in his life.—Study the portrait carefully. Don't know him, huh? Never saw him or his picture, huh?—Well that's because he is without gold lace-pomp-power. It is Frederick Wilhelm Hohenzollern—former Crown Prince of Germany. This new picture from his Holland refuge shows him without the little blonde mustache—and oh so changed.

SET HIM THINKING

General's Placard Caused Unpleasant Surprises.

When the Hun 75-mile gun with which Paris was harassed is doubtless still regarded by many as evidence of the much-advertised German mechanical ingenuity.

Ordinance experts have long been aware of the possibility of such a gun. But they have also been aware of its impracticability owing to a lack of means of controlling its fire effectively in such dastardly work as shelling a great city regardless of whom or what was hit.

As an object lesson our ordnance department has designed, without actually building, a supergun which dwarfs the German machine into insignificance. The data, recently made public through the Scientific American, fairly bewitches the lay mind.

The barrel of the gun is 225 feet long and weighs 225 tons. The pressure developed is 45,000 pounds to the square inch. The projectile has a muzzle velocity of 8,500 foot-seconds, and develops the terrific energy of 800,000 foot-tons. Its range is 121 miles, approximately the distance between Chicago and Madison, Wis. Its time of flight is four minutes, and it soars heavenward to a height of 46 miles.

This is awesome; but the cold-blooded expert points out that, after all, the gun delivers only a 400-pound shell, containing 60 pounds of high explosive, and that such a gun would cost $2,500,000. A bombing plane costing $30,000 would drop a 1,600-pound bomb with greater accuracy of aim.

The German supergun demonstrates the savagery of the Hun—the Berserker madness that strikes regardless of whom it strikes. But it also demonstrates an intellectual weakness—the love of mechanism for mechanism's sake. A complicated or difficult piece of machinery captivates his admiration because it is complicated or difficult, regardless of its practicability.

With American genius, simplicity is the desideratum. The mechanism, for instance, of the Browning automatic, whether pistol, rifle or machine gun, is astonishingly simple and practically demountable by the fingers alone. One looks at it and wonders why it wasn't invented half a century since. And right there one pays genius a high tribute.

QUAINT OLD FINNISH TOWN

Everything in Borga Seems to Go Back to About the Earliest Period of History.

The first glimpse of Borga from the water is a cluster of old wooden buildings carelessly assembled along the skyline. You gather that the town is red, owing to the bulky, crimson-painted packhouses in the foreground, but upon climbing up the steep, cobblestoned street to the town, you change your mind, and decide that it is going to be yellow. For all the funny, old-fashioned houses are painted that color. A little further on, however, it comes upon you suddenly that Borga possesses a color scheme—that all the red and yellow is just a background for the splendid, solemn grayness of its ancient cathedral, which completely dominates the town from the depths of a walled courtyard of the type that was popular in the early fifteenth century.

Borga began about thirteen hundred and something, and must have reached its height about the seventeenth century, for it contains very little of a later date than that. The cathedral contains nothing more modern than an organ, for example. Its white and gold pulpit was carved in the sixteenth century, and its wall sconces and wonderful crystal chandeliers are centuries old. Other Finnish towns have replaced their marvelous chandeliers with less beautiful but more practical fixtures of the current century, but Borga proudly upholds the past. The Borga cathedral still measures time by means of a quaint old hourglass filled with sand.

It was in this cathedral that the emperor of Russia, Alexander I, received the oaths of allegiance of the newly conquered Finns, a few days after he had signed the constitution which gave them their freedom. The house in which the constitution was signed—a modest, little, frame structure with old-fashioned, blue-painted blinds—is also pointed out with reverence to the traveler, and if you are duly sympathetic, the Borgans will then lead you up to the site of an old fortress reported to date back to an obscure period, even before the cathedral, when the Finns were heathens. It must be admitted that this site is anything but impressive now. There are some peculiar ditches, which, one is assured, are moats, and several barbed wire fences which are supposed to enclose the ancient and venerable embattlements. Nevertheless, the place must have atmosphere. If you can only find it, for it was here that Walter Runeberg, the great Finnish poet, used to find the inspiration for so many of his splendid songs.

Prehistoric Skull.

The bureau of American ethnology has made public the discovery of a human skull "in concrete," filled with hard breccia, which was found on the coast of Florida.

The skull, collected by Samuel L. King of Bristol, Tenn., from Demere Key, off Fort Myers, is believed to be of prehistoric origin, because, like other human bones discovered by scientists, it is so placed in a strata of earth and pebbles that the age of the bones can be ascertained geologically.

Other bones mineralized by age and believed to be from 20,000 to 40,000 years old have been discovered in Florida, Peru and California, giving proof of the existence of prehistoric man, as well as the prehistoric huge beasts; but man, it would seem, were not so much larger than those of today.

Students of these fossil remains believe that some of them were men who died during the glacial period, and that since then the shifting of the earth buried them under from 75 to 150 feet of gravel which water partly eroded, which makes it possible to estimate that at least thousands of years have elapsed since the man died.

Cold Electric Light.

Electric lights heat up, and an inventor, William L. Barnard, comes forward—that is to the patent office—with a scheme for making your electric lights cold. Heat is cumulative. You turn your lights on. They brighten immediately, but it takes them a few minutes to grow warm. This inventor purposes turning off the light before it has had time to develop any great heat. That is, he provides an incandescent electric lamp with numerous filaments, instead of the usual single one. These filaments are connected with a rotary switch which turns each filament on and off at intervals, but the periods of luminosity of the filaments are so spaced that a continuous illumination results. In other words, when one is switched off others are switched on, so that there is no discontinuity.

BIG GUN NOT WORTH WHILE

American Ordnance Experts Could Outdo the Huns in Savagery, but Are Not Likely To.

The Hun 75-mile gun with which Paris was harassed is doubtless still regarded by many as evidence of the much-advertised German mechanical ingenuity.

Ordinance experts have long been aware of the possibility of such a gun. But they have also been aware of its impracticability owing to a lack of means of controlling its fire effectively in such dastardly work as shelling a great city regardless of whom or what was hit.

As an object lesson our ordnance department has designed, without actually building, a supergun which dwarfs the German machine into insignificance. The data, recently made public through the Scientific American, fairly bewitches the lay mind.

The barrel of the gun is 225 feet long and weighs 225 tons. The pressure developed is 45,000 pounds to the square inch. The projectile has a muzzle velocity of 8,500 foot-seconds, and develops the terrific energy of 800,000 foot-tons. Its range is 121 miles, approximately the distance between Chicago and Madison, Wis. Its time of flight is four minutes, and it soars heavenward to a height of 46 miles.

This is awesome; but the cold-blooded expert points out that, after all, the gun delivers only a 400-pound shell, containing 60 pounds of high explosive, and that such a gun would cost $2,500,000. A bombing plane costing $30,000 would drop a 1,600-pound bomb with greater accuracy of aim.

The German supergun demonstrates the savagery of the Hun—the Berserker madness that strikes regardless of whom it strikes. But it also demonstrates an intellectual weakness—the love of mechanism for mechanism's sake. A complicated or difficult piece of machinery captivates his admiration because it is complicated or difficult, regardless of its practicability.

With American genius, simplicity is the desideratum. The mechanism, for instance, of the Browning automatic, whether pistol, rifle or machine gun, is astonishingly simple and practically demountable by the fingers alone. One looks at it and wonders why it wasn't invented half a century since. And right there one pays genius a high tribute.

Kel Hara.

For the first time in the history of Japan a man without a title is at the head of the government. Mr. Kel Hara, the present premier, is a commoner, born in northern Japan, and educated in Tokyo on a scholarship founded by the feudal lord of his clan. He studied law as a profession, but entered journalism, serving on the immediate journalistic ancestor of the now well-known Hochi Shimbun. From journalism he entered diplomacy under Marquess Inouye, then foreign minister, and was sent as consul to France. Returning to Japan he became director of the commercial bureau of the foreign office under Count Mutsu; and then in turn minister in Korea, and vice minister of foreign affairs in Japan, retiring temporarily to private life when Count Mutsu gave up the political work that had earned him the reputation of being the greatest modern Japanese diplomatist. Mr. Hara returned to national politics in 1910 as minister of communications in the new cabinet of Prince Hiro, and from that appointment his rise has been steady till he was lately made premier, and so became the first commoner that has ever in Japan occupied so high a position.

How It Began.

Ordinary figure as the boy scout has become in the United States, General Baden-Powell's visit added much to American knowledge of the movement. A good many newspaper readers were probably surprised to learn that it owes its beginning to the Boer war and the siege of Mafeking, without which it may be questioned whether there would be any boy scouts. In command at Mafeking, General Baden-Powell looked far beyond the mere ### and saw that a great and useful organization of boys might be developed from the corps of boy messengers organized to serve the forces holding that hard-pressed town. That was the beginning of it. But the same force of character that defended Mafeking carried forward the boy scout idea until it was generally recognized as a project for character building rather than encouraging militarism in the young. Another bit of information that probably surprised many Americans was that Baden-Powell is descended on his mother's side from Capt. John Smith.

Kept Old Funeral Custom.

Following an old family custom, the body of Mrs. G. H. Haigh, daughter of the late Sir Robert Hurry, was buried at midnight in the family vault at the little village church at Waul, England. The body of Mrs. Haigh, who was eighty-nine years of age, was brought from Penrhynendrach, Wales, and conveyed from the station to the church in a farm wagon, drawn by four black horses and escorted by three dozen men carrying lanterns. Six Welshmen acted as bearers. The only floral tribute was a large cross of evergreens.

Contribution of Jimmy.

Jimmy is seven and he's "smart" for his age. Even his mother admits it. She fears he'll be whirled up some day in a pillar of fire or something. Others who know Jimmy well doubt the pillar of fire business. His father the other day caught him smoking a cigarette and whipped him soundly. Jimmy cried loudly and attracted the attention of a neighbor, a man chum of the lad, who, seeking to comfort the boy, said: "Jimmy, of course it was very wrong of you to smoke a cigarette, and your papa whipped you not to hurt you, but to show you how wrong it was. Stop crying now and your hurt will soon be over."

"I ain't cryin' 'cause I was licked," said the child as he gazed through the tears, "but when papa grabbed me I swallowed my cigarette, and it was the last one I had."—Exchange.

A Wonderful World.

"Don't talk to me about the wonders of past ages," said Uncle Joe Cannon. "The world today is far more wonderful than ever before. Just think: It took Columbus as many months as it now takes days to cross the ocean, and we talk about flying and traveling a mile a minute as though they were nothing."

"Why, the other day I dropped into a country school just in time to hear the teacher ask:

"Johnny, into what two great classes is the human race divided?" And Johnny answered promptly:

"Motorists and pedestrians."

"That's what I call progress. After awhile there won't be any pedestrians."—Los Angeles Times.

Still It's Well to Try.

What is said to be the record for resuscitation from drowning was accomplished by United States life-savers after the victim had been submerged for six minutes. Among a great many persons the erroneous belief exists that persons can be resuscitated after having been in the water a great length of time. Cases have been known where resuscitation methods were used for hours after the drowned persons had been under water for a half-hour, or even longer. Thus it will be seen that drowning is a quick death and the hazard of the water correspondingly great.—Exchange.

Thought It Strange.

"What's the matter, Mr. Green, don't you drink?"

"No. But why do you ask?"

"You're the first visitor we've had in some time that pa hasn't insisted on showing the cellar to."

Much of Canada Unexplored.

Boy, page (Christopher Columbus the Second): There is still nearly one-third of Canada that is still undiscovered, and if Indian reports are to be believed, there is in the basin of the Mackenzie river one of the largest areas of possible oil-bearing country and oil fields, since the recent enormous developments in the use of oil fuel, are as great a national asset as rich gold deposits.

Indians also report the existence of lakes a hundred miles long in the Yukon that no white man has ever seen, while even the Indians apparently know nothing of the undiscovered Mackenzie mountains, about which the chief information obtainable at present is that they exist.

Here is a chance for some adventurous spirit whose ardor for new and strange experiences is not dampened by too much participation in the late war, to win fame and riches by discovering unexplored Canada and opening up a vast new area with unpredictable resources to the service of civilization.

A TREATY WITH FRANCE

PRESIDENT WILSON SENDS TO THE SENATE WITH MESSAGE.

For Military Assistance to France by United States in Case of an Unprovoked Attack by Germany.

On Tuesday President Wilson sent the special Franco-American Treaty to the Senate with following message:

"Gentlemen of the Senate: I take pleasure in laying before you a treaty with the Republic of France, the object of which is to secure that republic of the immediate aid of the United States of America in case of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her on the part of Germany. I earnestly hope that the treaty will meet with your cordial approval and will receive an early ratification at your hands, along with the treaty of peace with Germany. Now that you have had an opportunity to examine the great document I presented to you two weeks ago, it seems opportune to lay before you this treaty which is meant to be in effect a part of it.

"It was signed on the same day with the treaty of peace and is intended as a temporary supplement to it. It is believed that the treaty of peace with Germany itself provides adequate protection to France against aggression from her recent enemy on the east; but the years immediately ahead of us contain many incalculable possibilities. The covenant of the League of Nations provides for military action for the protection of its members only upon advice of the council of the league—advice given, it is to be presumed, only upon deliberation and acted upon by each of the governments of the member states only if its own judgment justifies such action. The object of the special treaty with France which I now submit to you is to provide for immediate military assistance to France by the United States in case of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her by Germany without waiting for the advice of the council of the League of Nations that such action will be taken. It is to be an arrangement, not independent of the League of Nations, but under it.

"It is, therefore, expressly provided that this treaty shall be made the subject of consideration at the same time with the treaty of peace with Germany; that this special arrangement shall receive the approval of the council of the league; and that this special provision for the safety of France shall remain in force only until, upon the application of one of the parties to it, the council of the league, acting, if necessary, by a majority vote, shall agree that the provisions of the covenant of the league afford her sufficient protection.

"I was moved to sign this treaty by considerations which will, I hope, seem as persuasive and as irresistible to you as they seemed to me. We are bound to France by ties of friendship which we have always regarded and shall always regard, as particularly sacred. She assisted us to win our freedom as a nation. It is seriously to be doubted whether we could have won it without her gallant and timely aid. We have recently had the privilege of assisting in driving enemies, who were also enemies of the world, from her soil.

but that does not pay our debt to her. Nothing can pay such a debt. She now desires that we should promise to lend our great force to keep her safe against the power she has had most reason to fear. Another great nation volunteers the same promise. It is one of the fine reversals of history that that other nation should be the very power from whom France fought to set us free. A new day has dawned. Old antagonisms are forgotten. The common cause of freedom and enlightenment has created new comradeships and a new perception of what it is wise and necessary for great nations to do to free the world of intolerable fear. The governments who wish to be members of the League of Nations ask leave of the council of the league to be permitted to go to the assistance of a friend whose situation has been found to be one of peculiar peril, without awaiting the advice of the league to act.

"It is by taking such pledges as this that we prove ourselves faithful to the utmost to the high obligations of gratitude and tested friendship. Such an act as this seems to me one of the proofs that we are a people that sees the true heart of duty and prefers honor to its own separate course of peace.

"WOODROW WILSON.
"The White House, July 29, 1919."

BIG DAY IN NEW OXFORD.

When the 14 Tribes of Red Men Held Their Pow-Wow.

The Red Men of York and Adams counties twelfth annual convention in New Oxford last Saturday was a great success and the event attracted one of the largest gatherings that that town has ever entertained. Fourteen lodges from the two counties were represented and the business of the convention occupied the attention of the delegates almost all day.

Preceding the closed sessions of the lodge a public meeting was held, at which the citizens of New Oxford assisted in the entertainment of the visitors, and addresses were made by Charles F. Bell, of Philadelphia, great sachem of the lodge for the State; Hon. William H. Long, of Hanover, past great sachem; J. L. Williams, of Gettysburg; J. A. Cashman, burgess of New Oxford, and John E. Wisler, of Mount Wolf, the presiding officer of the convention.

The delegates then went into a secret pow-wow in the wagon of the New Oxford tribe, when Hanover was selected as the place of meeting for next year, and the following officers were elected: George D. Shelly, of New Oxford, president; A. R. Simpson, of Hanover, vice president; George H. Latterman, of York, secretary, and James Gross, of York, treasurer.

Perhaps the biggest parade ever held there was staged at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The undersigned executors of the last will and testament of Bernard I. Walker, late of Orrtanna, Adams Co., Pa., deceased, will offer at public sale on the premises, the following valuable real estate to wit:

1. All that certain Tract of Land situated in Franklin township, Adams county aforesaid, lying about one-half mile south of Flohr's Church and the Lincoln Highway, adjoining lands of Mary A. Soldiers Should Keep War Insurance

As soldiers are demobilized, and return to their various occupations in civil life, it becomes increasingly difficult to inform them fully as to the privileges and advantages under the several plans of conversion of their War Risk Insurance. To the end that information may be as generally distributed as possible, every effort is being made by the War Department and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance to give wide publicity to the terms of the new policies, in order that soldiers may not inadvertently drop their present government term insurance. There are six forms of policies to which the present insurance may be converted.

- (a) Ordinary Life.
- (b) 20-Payment Life.
- (c) 30-Payment Life.
- (d) 20-Year Endowment.
- (e) 30-Year Endowment.
- (f) Endowment maturing at age 62.

The insurance may be converted to any of the six forms mentioned above at any time within five years, by the simple process of sending an application for conversion to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C. The present form of insurance may be carried as it is for five years, but no longer.

One of the most valuable features of government insurance is that no physical examination is required. This is especially important to men who have received injuries or become impaired in health while in the military service, and desire insurance of a permanent nature. The government asks no questions about a man's physical condition at the time of conversion.

In the event the insured is carrying $10,000 insurance, and dies, his beneficiary will receive $750 a month for 240 months, or twenty years, or a total of $18,000. If the insured becomes totally and permanently disabled, for example, through the loss of both eyes, both legs or both arms—the proceeds of the policy immediately become payable to him, and he will receive $750 a month as he lives, or as long as the disability continues, without the payment of any further premiums. This disability feature of the policy is included without any additional cost to the insured.

It is difficult at times to make soldiers understand that the government is not trying to make money out of them. It is impossible for the government to make money out of the rates which will be charged. Operating expenses, salaries, etc., are paid by the government separately, and do not come out of the premiums. This enables the insurance to be issued at a remarkably low rate.

New Internal Revenue District.

The reorganized First Pennsylvania Internal Revenue District has been divided into ten divisions located at Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Lancaster, Chester, Norristown, Allentown, Pottsville, Allentown and York. The first week of every month every town of 5000 population will have a zone deputy and the remainder of the months such deputy will spend in surrounding territory. It is likely a zone deputy will be stationed at Gettysburg.

RED CROSS HOME SERVICE.

tions working with the various towns of the county. One of these will be a Red Cross Chapter. There are a number of counties in which this sort of work has been done, and the following has been the general procedure:

1. A get-together of the county-wide agencies for exchange of plans and projects and for mutual information about the work of each.
2. A study of the county concerning the outstanding needs of the county as a whole and certain towns in particular.
3. A conference of the people called by these various agencies, at which time reports are made concerning work done by any and all agencies, and specific problems of the county discussed by representatives of State organizations, boards, and institutions having work in charge.

4. The presentation by various agencies of their program of work for the coming year. This should be acted upon by the county conference, rather than in the way of authorizing the agencies to these with particular lines of work.

5. Some sort of a medium through which the county-wide agencies may come together frequently to keep in touch with each other. In some instances the "County Council" idea has been used. The county council is comprised of one person from each county-wide agency. There will be found many counties in which there are no county organizations. In some of these, part of the purpose of bringing the people together may be that of determining whether there is need for a county demonstration agent or some other line of work. There will be no counties in which there are not enough organizations to form a county council, but there will usually be found enough people so that there can be a county conference to consider outstanding problems of the county.

Lincoln Highway Notes.

The Transcontinental Motor Convoy that went through Gettysburg July 8th is half way across the continent, maintaining the itinerary laid out and expects to reach San Francisco by Sept. 1.

Lancaster county has planted 50 American elms and sycamores 8 to 10 feet high along the Lincoln Highway. A good example to be followed.

Ohio has a program for the Lincoln Highway to cost $1,422,000. Nebraska will have completed next year 38 miles of paved roadway as a start toward a paved route entirely across that State.

At a point on Lincoln Highway in New Jersey, recently eleven thousand autos were counted, passing in 15 hours.
